Class Song

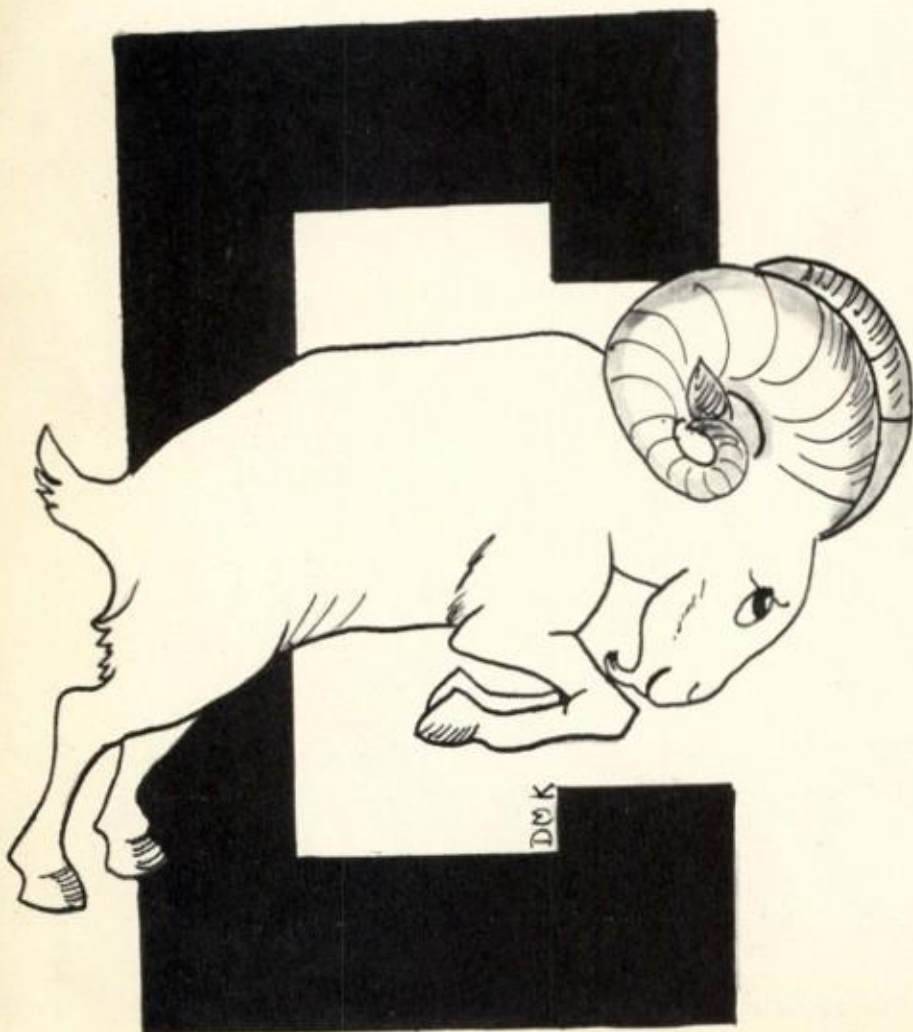

Words by
Mrs Alvin Chadwell
LCHS 1928

Classical, Dear Classical

Music by
Gerald A. Parsons
LCHS 1933

Oh, Classical, dear Classical,
How bright is your loved name,
Eternal as your wisdom's strength,
Enduring as your fame.
Oh, ageless is your lasting faith,
Immortal vision's dream.
You flow through life with peace and hope,
A shining, crystal stream.
You flow through life with peace and hope,
A shining, crystal stream.

Oh, Classical, dear Classical,
Your bright ideals still shine
In countless flames that light the world
With glowing truth divine.
Oh, character and culture are
Your priceless gifts to us.
Our searching quest has found its goal
Within your radius.
Our searching quest has found its goal
Within your radius.

Oh, Classical, dear Classical,
Our song will always start
On wings of silver light to rise
And reach from heart to heart.
Oh, bravely as an eagle flies
Through darkness and through fears,
Your memory will lead us through
Life's challenge of the years.
Your memory will lead us through
Life's challenge of the years.

Principal's Message

Dear Class of 1961,

The wonderful age in which we are living holds many advantages and opportunities for those with the courage to grasp them. This is the period of the New Frontier—outer space, diplomacy, economic growth. Accept the challenge that is set before you, my dear graduates. Do not falter in your determination to attain your goal. With trust in God and faith in your own ability, success is assured.

I extend to you my heartiest congratulations and best wishes for your success and happiness in the years ahead.

Sincerely yours,

Frederick A. Buckley

TWINS!

Jean and Janice Gallo have puzzled everyone with their identical looks. When any one wishes to address either of the girls, he has only to shout a name and cross his fingers! Jean hopes to be a hairdresser; Jan, an IBM operator. Doubles of everything to you, girls!

NEW GIRL IN THE CLASS

The Class of 1961 wishes to welcome Patricia Kelley, a transfer student from St. Mary's. Patricia is an intelligent, warm-hearted girl whose main interest is tennis. She aspires to be a speech therapist, and with her conscientiousness, she is sure to succeed. Best wishes, Pat!

TWINS?

These young misses, Gail and Janice Bergendahl, really are twins. However, because they do not dress alike—nor do they look alike—it is relatively simple for one to identify them. Gail is planning her future as an airline hostess, and Jan has her course mapped in commercial art. Success to you both!

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS

This morning, I bring you the greetings of all my classmates. For us, today's exercises are a combination of the happy and the nostalgic: happy because the Class of Sixty-one has achieved its objective in being graduated this morning, nostalgic because our days at Classical have now slipped into the past. Yet we do not wish to stop the hands of time. We anticipate the future. Today marks a sharp division in our lives, for it closes the door on our secondary school days and it opens the door to work or to avenues of higher education. Whichever be the lot of each of us, each of us realizes that he now stands more or less alone without the guidance of the school principal or the school faculty. It is really for us a commencement of a new life.

In bringing you the greetings of my classmates, I wish to express our appreciation to all those people who have helped us during our three years in high school. To our parents we give the thanks which is due them today, for we know the sacrifices which they have made for us. To the faculty, to Mr. Buckley, our principal, to Mr. McGuinn, Superintendent of Schools, and to Mr. Marks and Mr. McGuiness, Deputy Superintendents of Schools, goes a sincere "Thank You," from us. To everybody, then, a warm welcome from all my classmates.

Richard Gillis

President of Class of '61

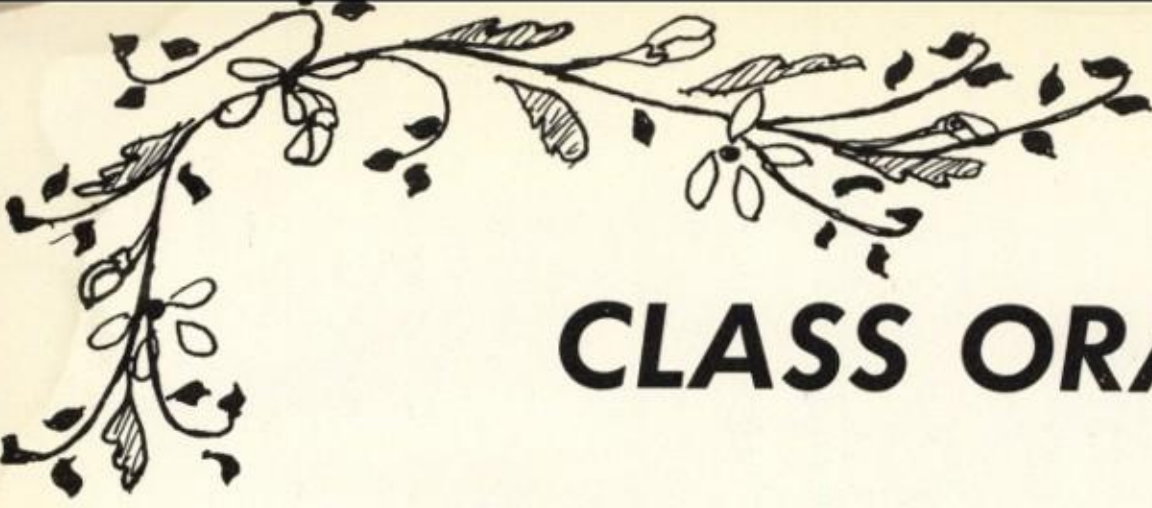

CLASS GIFT

For the past three years, we, the members of the Class of '61, have enjoyed many happy occasions at Classical High. During these years, the school has created for us momentous events which each of us will long remember as behind us today we leave regretfully those who have developed our patterns of life. Now that Classical is about to become our Alma Mater, we wish to leave the school a gift which will be useful and at the same time will reflect our affection for the school. We have chosen as our gift to Classical a Bulletin Board so that the members of the school and her guests may know the calendar of events that will take place in the school. The bulletin board has a glass face and removable letters which can be arranged to describe any occasion. This bulletin board will be placed on a standard in the main foyer of the school. With this gift that I present to you, Kenneth, my class says a fond, yet sad, farewell, to Classical. At this time I also wish to thank the teachers and the principal, Mr. Buckley, for their kindness, their patience, and their interest during our three years at Classical.

Karan Ashford

Thank you, Karan. It is a privilege for me to represent the school this morning in accepting the gift of the Class of '61. The Class Gift, traditionally associated with commencement exercises, reflects the tie that binds the graduating class to its Alma Mater, and is a tangible evidence on the part of the graduates of their continuing interest in and affection for the school. In your choice, Karan, you have been discerning, for Classical can use to advantage the gift you have described. It will give emphasis to the significant events in school life. Thank you again for your gift, Karan. As you leave today, the undergraduates of the school congratulate you on your graduation, and wish you all a happy, successful future.

CLASS ORATION

Since Russian space achievements, educators and laymen alike have been preoccupied with proficiency of education on the secondary level. Yet long before Sputnik, education of excellent quality had characterized the American school. However, since the world is rapidly changing, everyone must realize that education, too, must lend itself to the needs of the time. Education must be flexible; it must strive constantly to improve, and to develop the abilities of the young to their full potential; it must strive constantly to challenge a pupil's intellect to the end that he may be a good citizen, whether he works in the field of direct vocational effort or studies in a higher institution of learning.

In today's fluid society, therefore, it behooves everyone to realize that the success of our democracy depends upon an informed citizenry, a citizenry the character of which has its beginnings on the very first day that a child enters school and progresses steadily until diplomas on various levels mark the achievement of an individual as being in accord with the standards and norms of a good school system. Emerson said that without educational ideals, without philosophical continuity, there could be no such thing as a free democracy. Such an interdependence has characterized America from its early beginnings. In the opinion of Thomas Jefferson: "By far the most important bill in our democratic code is the one that provides for the diffusion of knowledge among all the people. No other sure foundation can be devised for the preservation of freedom and universal happiness."

Historically, education in America has always been experimental, always seeking new and more efficacious methods of training both the mind and the heart. Today more than ever this dual concept is the motivating force in all good school systems. If democracy is to be dynamic and forward looking, as it must be to survive, it must constantly exert every effort to make certain that all its citizens are as informed, as moral and wise as they are capable of being. The school must emphasize not only intellectual growth; it must also point out the worthy aims of life. It must teach boys and girls to develop their abilities. In this growth they will inevitably learn self-discipline, self-respect, and respect for others. In the process of acquiring these characteristics, they will learn to evaluate, to make decisions. To the degree that a school awakens in its pupils perception and sensitivity to great moral and civic values, in the same measure will it produce good leaders in every branch of effort, leaders with their fingers on the pulse of humanity, alert to fluctuations of thought, critical of trends and sincere in judgment.

And who is responsible for these objectives which I have set forth? Most authorities agree that the responsibility of educating the hearts and minds of American youth lies with the home, with the school, and with the church. Since the child is for the greater part of his life under the influence of the home, it is in this environment that he must learn to respect and value education. The parents are responsible for instilling into the mind of the child, the value of knowledge, thus giving him an incentive to learn. To achieve this objective, the parents should require high standards of accomplishments which they will achieve by exacting from the child good habits of study. Every child should have a pattern for his homework, a pattern that follows him throughout his school days. In the relative rigidity of this plan, the child will learn good work habits and will feel that he must respond to the stimulation of his parents' requirements. He unconsciously will establish his own standards of accomplishments and will be less liable to engage in intellectual laziness and intellectual dishonesty than is the child whose parents are indifferent to his school progress. Moreover, in America today there is close contact between the home and the school if parents will but avail themselves of this advantage. Every school system welcomes an honest interest in its effectiveness. Every school system recognizes the fact that if parents are interested in the school, this concern will be reflected in the men and women they elect to the board of education. Dr. Conant, in his report on high schools, emphasizes the significance of this board, for from this group stems the educational philosophy basic to a good system. This group implements its philosophy through long-range plans for flexible growth so that every child will have an opportunity to prepare himself for the future, either on the vocational or college level. Thus it follows that citizens may be stimulated to fruitful civic activity to maintain a genuine and continuing desire to keep their schools of the highest order.

And what of the church in its relation to education? Its part, all authorities agree, is to teach that the really good life is a happy combination of the intellectual and the spiritual.

The world today is highly competitive. Unless America keeps its intellectual and moral standards high our nation can easily become materialistic with the emphasis on the superficial, the meretricious values in life. Historically, such emphasis has always spelled mediocrity and eventual national distaste. We, as a nation, have a sense of history. This sense will teach us that the nation which is educated on all levels, I repeat, on all levels, is the nation which remains free.

Michael Beatrice

CLASS HISTORY

Upon graduating from Classical most of us will go our separate ways. But as we leave, we hold fond remembrances of the three years we have spent here. Who can forget the many wonderful times that we, the Class of '61, have had within the walls of Classical.

We will always remember that first horrible day of school in our sophomore year. We watched in dismay as the seniors ripped up program cards of innocent newcomers. Our fears were somewhat lessened, when under the direction of "Uncle Tom" Todd, we chose Charlie Veradt to be our first president. One year rolled along and before we knew it, it was April. Realizing that the class treasury was empty, Mr. Todd decided we should run a record hop. We finally made our mark, as the dance was a huge success. The feature of the dance was the beautiful, lifelike caricatures of the class officers. Many nice remarks were made about these works of art, which, by the way, were done by one of the class' most accomplished artists, Hank Lewandowski. In order to get even with the seniors before they graduated, we put on a talent show for them. Then came the sad day when we lost some of our classmates. We received our report cards for the last quarter. With the sophomore year under our belts, we dashed off madly in all directions.

We will always remember that first wonderful day of school in our junior year. We watched with glee as our classmates ripped up program cards of innocent newcomers. Although the football season wasn't too successful, the Rams, with great help from our junior players ended English's nine-year victory streak by completely immobilizing their offense to the tune of 8-0. The following week John LeBrasseur was elected to captain the football team next year. That same year we decided to get some money fast and we held another dance. All the students came to stomp at the "Reindeer Romp," and our treasury grew.

About this time, Mr. Buckley announced that we would have a Parent-Pupil Banquet. This evening was initiated to better acquaint the parents with the teachers. Although we were fearful of the indirect consequences of an affair of this type, the weight of worry upon us was considerably lessened, when Mr. Buckley announced that the teachers could speak no evil of us.

Then came the Washington trip. Many of our classmates packed their bags and took off for a glorious week of fun and frolic at the nation's capital. Upon returning, the travelers celebrated at a party with their parents in attendance. As the year drew to a close, it was time to elect officers for the senior year. The members of the class, after long deliberation, selected "Dunking Dobie" Gillis to lead us into our last year. Steve Robinson was elected official flagbearer, and Donna Blazer won the Secretary's job. After being promoted to grade XII, we left for the beaches to rest up for the coming year.

The senior year's activities began with the cheerleaders' dance. Everyone enjoyed making fun of the funny-looking cheerleaders; not the girls, the drawings on the wall. The next big smash on the social calendar was the play, "Androcles and the Lion." "Boxcar" Schnurbush was the hit of the evening. At last came the event the senior football players had waited three years for. The football dance. It seems that all senior football players and their dates got in free. Our Senior Parents' Night boasted a large attendance and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all. The year's second play, under the direction of Mr. Marcoux, was a bigger success than the first. The only person who didn't enjoy it was Coach Moriaty. He kept thinking how the outcome of the season might have been more pleasant if he had "Ginger" Dobrowski at one of the halfback slots. As the weather got warmer the lines in front of Mr. Hutchin's office got longer. The warm weather brought on the institution of a new club. It was called "The Sun Worshipers." However, as we might have guessed, this club didn't last too long. The completion of final exams left us in a wonderful mood. The gang practicing for the Banquet Show practiced eight periods a day.

Well, that's what they told the teachers, anyway. Suddenly we were shocked to find the prom at the New Ocean House was only a few nights away. After several days of panicky preparations, the big night came. Everything went off like clockwork, and the prom was a magnificent success. At the conclusion of the prom we hopped in our vehicles and dashed to Judi Giarla's post prom party. The foundation nearly buckled under the weight of the crowd who attended. After the party we went home to get some much needed sleep. A few hours later, we left for Salisbury Beach. When we were through battling the bugs, a sizeable number of those in attendance swarmed to Kathy Coyle's wilderness outpost. After being driven away by the Indians, we returned to Lynn to rest. An hour later the locusts invaded Phyllis Warden's home for a cookout. With the elimination of the food supply, our weary celebrants finally went home, supposedly.

With only graduation day left, we look back on our years at Classical, and realize that we will miss all of our friends. No longer will the boys meet in Pete Marvin's car to exchange stories. No more will we see Bob Osiecki and Dick Neenan running to Miss O'Keefe for passes. We've attended Mr. Horne's singing math lessons for the last time. The second period physics class will be without a chain. We will lose a great class advisor and friend in Mr. Todd, and a wise councilor in Mr. Buckley. But we may rest assured that we, the Class of '61, will not forget, nor be forgotten.
